BI-ANNUAL SHOWS ARE NOW UPON US

(By Margaret Mason.)

I pray you do not have a fit Dame Fashion will not stand for it.

For anything that fits, my dear, Will simply not be done this year.

New York, Oct. 12.—The bi-annual Fashion shows are now upon us and languid, languishing models are undulating a million dollars worth of furs and metallic embroidery and brocades all over the smartest shops.

All the worth while gowns are there, they Doucet everyone will wear. Our old friend Poret has a pair, of stunning ones with Chinese air, and Lanvin, Callot, Premet too and Paquin also show a few.

Since the Chinese tendency is so pronounced in most all of the imported models the settings for the display of the gowns is all Chinked and lacquered and gilded and Chinese goded and rugged up. The models glide around among the carved ivory and teakwood and Chinese porcelain as much at home as if they had never been outside the Great wall of China in their lives.

Of course a few of the models are allowed to sit on the Russian steppes and look like Olga of the Volga in fur trimmed peasant blouses smothered in fur and hectic worsted embroidery, but in fact the similarity between the lines of the loose Russian blouse and the loose Chinese coat, the brilliant embroideries and those of Russia, and the lavish use of fur on both make it rather puzzling unless you are a connoisseur on Chinese and Russian art or at least of Russian and Chinese tea to tell one from the other.

After taking an oblique look and getting a Chinese slant on those different showings of imported models so rich in materials, reputation and price, my advice to the woman who cherishes the wild ambition of leading the mode back home is to wait until she gets there. Then let her hire the village seamstress and have that personage fit all her gowns on some one with a figure the exact antithesis of her own. When she dons them everybody will be willing to swear she is wearing a Premet or Doucet model of the very latest.

ORDINANCES EFFECTIVE OCT. 15.

The ordinances governing low hanging awnings and gates that swing outward over the sidewalk will go into effect Monday next, October 15, and all who have not had these changes made by that time will stand the risk of being fined for every day the nuisance continues. It would be well for all owners to see that the law is obeyed as the ordinances have been passed for the convenience and benefit of all.
